studio lezmi shows photostudios I found on my ways through turkey, syria and lebanon in october - november 2007.

everytime I saw a studio I went in and asked for a portrait.
the photographer was be free to do whatever he wanted.
after the session I usually outed myself as a photographer and asked him to pose for me in his studio. then I took some pictures of his studio or shop window. the more I got into it, the more I realised that the documentation of these studios was something very crucial. with the vogue of modern digitalcameras and therefore less clients these studios will soon have to close down their familybusiness.
just as they did a couple of years ago in european cities.
in a few years these studios and their photographers will disappear forever.

this book is dedicated to all the studiophotographers I met.
